Aging: The Health Care Challenge

Synopsis

"Aging is one of the new textbooks you will find that covers the health-care management of the older person for the entire allied health team....Although Aging was written to meet the needs of students and clinicians in rehabilitation, it also would be a suitable read for anyone who cares or makes decisions for an older adult." -- Advance for LPNs, October 21, 2002"Although this text is written from the framework of the American health care system, it is relevant to practitioners in Canada as well. The case studies and examples that are shared are comprehensive and inclusive of various challenges faced by the elderly, those working in geriatrics, and the systems that support this work. This book offers a useful baseline for occupational therapists to use in their geriatric rehabilitation practice." -- Marie Nelson, Volume 70, Number 1, Canadian Journal of Occupational Therapy, February 2003This classic textbook provides an interdisciplinary approach to the assessment and rehabilitative management of older persons. Clinically focused, it suggests strategies for implementing practical rehabilitation goals in a variety of care settings.

Customer Reviews

This book is absolutely terrible! Aside from the mind-numbingly long paragraphs that state and re-state the same things, there are serious typographical and editorial errors. The author uses the word "tantamount" so many times it could be a drinking game. Not only that, but he/she uses it without even knowing what the word means! Someone (hopefully an editor) should tell him/her that "tantamount" means "equivalent in effect or value" and the word he/she is really looking for is "paramount" which means "of chief importance or value". It really changes the meaning of the sentence "Nutrition is TANTAMOUNT in the maintenance of health" the text is informative, & put in a manner that makes following & remembering the info, very easy.
