K-Gr 4 "Compiled by former U.S. Children's Poet Laureate Lewis, this assortment of nature-themed verse is, in a word, breathtaking. The selections represent a variety of styles, time periods, countries of origin, lengths, and themes; all are set against a stunning backdrop of full-bleed photographs. Offerings are divided into sections such as "In the sky," "In the Sea," and "On the Move" and run the gamut from whimsical to informative to comical and back again. William Wordsworth's "I Wandered Lonely as a Cloud," Li Po's "You Ask Why," and Jack Prelutsky's "The Ways of Living Things" provide myriad entry points into exploring and celebrating the natural world. Photographs, of the superior caliber one might expect from National Geographic, are labeled with a description of the animal, plant, or location depicted. At book's end, budding poets (and their teachers) will find a list of recommended children's materials on wordplay in poetry, sorted by type (acrostics, palindromes, haiku, and more). An index, divided by poem, subject, poem first line, and poet, renders this work exceedingly useful. VERDICT An excellent addition to any poetry collection.âJill Heritage Maza, Montclair Kimberley Academy, Montclair, NJ

"Few books make it clearer why nature inspires so many poets to reach for the pen." -- Starred Review, Publishers Weeklyâ"An inherently fascinating and fun read from first page to last, and colorfully illustrated throughout, the 'National Geographic Book of Nature Poetry...' is certain to be an enduringly popular addition to family, school, and community library collections.â • â Midwest Book Review" "Nature in all of its colorful, vivid, stunning glory is presented here in full-page, beautifully reproduced color photographs (National Geographicâ's specialty, naturally) and spot-on accompanying poemsâ|.â This is a full package; a duet of wonder. A beautifully produced collection that will easily snag the attention of young readers.â •â " Booklist.

What a great book! Okay, I may be a little biased because I have a poem in it, but then, I loved the first volume (about animals) and I didn't have a poem in that one. Whoever thought of pairing photos from the National Geographic archives with poetry for children is a genius. And then to pick J. Patrick Lewis to edit it! (He's the former Children's Poet Laureate of the United States.) The other thing I like about the collection is that it has more than 200 poems. Poetry collections for kids sometimes have only 14 or so poems, but this is a big book and a veritable feast. When I got my copy I sat down in my reading corner with a happy sigh, ready for a nice long stretch of good stuff. Plus it has poems in it by some of my favorite poetry people on cool topics like sailing stones and brinicles (I'm looking at you, Laura Salas!). The only thing left to say is ENJOY!

Absolutely superior pictures inside. Great gift, or coffee table book. Used it in 6th grade for my son's project on a book report for alliteration examples.

I thought it was a book of poems for children, but it wasn't. So, I gave it to my adult granddaughter who is a biology major in college, and she loves it.

Lovely poems and photos! My children (6 and 4) love this book!

Beauty pics and a great poetry collection.

Such a wonderful book of beautiful photographs and a variety of poems.

Surprised how it is for adults and children.

Love it!
