Political Economy: The Contest Of Economic Ideas

Synopsis

Now in its third edition, Political Economy: The Contest of Economic Ideas is a fully updated survey of the political economy and its connection with social concerns. Moving beyond conventional treatments, this unique text offers a "big-picture" overview of the analytical tools and value judgments associated with competing schools of economic thought. Featuring an exceptionally engaging writing style, this text makes the complexities of contesting economic ideas—including classical political economy and Marxist economics and neoclassical economics and neo-liberalism—clear and accessible to students. The third edition includes a new chapter on the economics of happiness and new sections on current issues like the global financial crisis, climate change, and "affluenza."

Frank Stilwell is a Professor within the Department of Political Economy at The University of Sydney. His research interests centre on Australian economic policies, urban and regional development and economic inequality.

Good book, must read!

book is easy to read and understand

awesome

Horrible textbook. It is advertised as a book that is meant to teach students about the different ways to view the economy and the world. Rather than doing this, it bashes Neoclassical economics and lists everything that is wrong with neoliberalism. If you want to talk about bias in the college classroom this is it right here.
