Explorations: Through The Wormhole

Synopsis

It's 2052 and the first known wormhole appears in lunar orbit. Earth sends a ship to investigate and the future of space travel changes forever. The Solar System develops in many ways over the centuries, but one thing remains constant; the wormholes continue to appear. Join many of today's most exciting indie science fiction authors as they chart a shared universe and future-history, each telling us stories of: Explorations: Through the Wormhole. The complete list of authors includes: Richard Fox, Ralph Kern, Stephen Moss, Josh Hayes, Shellie Horst, PP Corcoran, Chris Guillory, Rosie Oliver, Charlie Pulsipher, Jacob Cooper, Jo Zebedee, PJ Strebor, Thaddeus White, and Stephen Palmer.

Customer Reviews

As you might expect with an anthology, the stories vary in quality of writing and creativity. But I enjoyed most of them. It was interesting to read the authors who influenced them and where their story ideas came from. I would like to give this volume a score of 3.5 but half points aren't available.

There are two reasons why I highly recommend this book. 1. There is a common underlying theme - wormholes. The different approach each author takes to this hypothetical structure keeps the reader intrigued. 2. There were only two "clunkers", at least for my taste. I was left wanting more.

I found the first two stories in this collection to be interesting and entertaining. Unfortunately, I can't say the same thing about the other stories. They all focused too much on future conflicts with malevolent aliens and too little on the exploration and science related to the discovery of a wormhole. I would have preferred more investigation of the wonders associated with the revelation that wormholes do exist and less far in the future combat between civilizations.

I haven't read a book of short stories in years, simply because I don't find them compelling. I thought I'd give this book a try, and I have not changed. I simply don't like this format. If you like short stories, this will appeal to you. This is simply another case of 'it's not you, it's me.'

Great imagined stories to give depth to theories of wormholes enjoyable Si Fi.

OK

Great collection. Many different ideas all well done
